12. JUSTIFICATION:

The Army National Guard Pre-Ranger Course is a requirement for all National Guard soldiers to attend before Ranger School. The course has boasted great success by graduating over 65% of National Guard soldiers attending Ranger School over the past three years. The Pre-Ranger course is a vital building block for National Guard soldiers. It bridges the gap between civilian life and the Army. Also the course allows soldiers to become more climatized to the weather and surroundings of Ranger School. The course currently has no AGR personnel to administer the course. The cadre must be trained before every class. This full time soldier would provide continuity for the rigorous training the soldiers are about to encounter. This consistency would improve the overall safety of the course.

13. SPECIAL REMARKS:

This position must be a paid parachute position. The Pre-Ranger Course will conduct Airborne Operations with the Ranger Training Brigade to enhance evaluation skills for Ranger training. This will also provide the future students with information on the procedures inherent to Airborne Operations.
